

Your Duty of Care Is No Longer Optional

Protect Patients, Staff, and Visitors Before Tragedy Strikes

Healthcare facilities are expected to be sanctuaries of safety and security. Yet hospitals and clinics face a growing threat of workplace gun violence, putting patients, staff, and visitors at risk — and exposing organizations to devastating lawsuits and regulatory scrutiny.

The Rising Risk in Healthcare

Healthcare is highly susceptible to violence

Hospitals, clinics, and behavioral health centers are often accessible, high-stress environments.

Negligence can be costly

Verdicts and settlements can reach millions, and failure to protect staff and patients can trigger regulatory fines and accreditation risks.

Employers are worried for good reason

53% of organizations are very concerned about workplace violence at their place of work.

Nearly 1 in 5 (19%) have already experienced it.

Talent retention is critical

47% of employees say safety impacts their decision to stay. With staffing shortages already severe, violence risk drives turnover.
